

Sofia Venturoli, master in Social Anthropology and Amerindian Studies at the University of St. Andrews, PhD in Anthropology at the University of Bologna, teaches Latina American Anthropology, Latina American Studies and Political Anthropology at the University of Turin. She carried out ethnographic and archival research in various contexts in Latin America. Among other projects, she coordinated the anthropological research of the "Antonio Raimondi" Project in the Peruvian Andes, (Maeci- Unibo), the Os grupos indígenas Urbanos em São Paulo: identidade, práticas de cidadania e ação política entre os Panakraré project (Fapesp- Unicamp). She is currently coordinator of the MAECI - Unito project Community, Archives, Territories project. Historical-anthropological mission in the northern Andes: Ecuador, Peru. Her main research interests include sociocultural changes among Latin American indigenous groups, ethnogenesis, indigenous political participation in urban and rural areas, memory patrimonialization processes. She also is carrying out research on the Gini documentary fund and the CISP expedition to Mexico (1933), and on the Agustín Codazzi fund and the expedition of the Corographic Commission in Colombia (1850).